Madeline Syers

The 1908 Summer Olympic Games were going to be held in Rome. Sadly, the volcano Vesuvius erupted in 1906 and because of this, the Olympics were hosted by London instead. Twenty-two countries participated in twenty-two sports from aquatics and archery to tug-of-war and wrestling.

In figure skating, England had Florence Madeline Syers – known as Madge – as a medal hopeful. In the 1902 World Figure Skating Championships, Madge was the first woman to compete in what had always been a male event. In fact, a women’s event at the Olympics was created as a direct result of her achievements. In 1906 and 1907 Madge won the ladies’ events and went on to win the gold at the 1908 Summer Olympics. The judges had commented on how excellent she was and that she was in a totally different class to all of the other competitors.

Madge Syers was fundamental in changing the sport of figure skating in the Olympics by becoming the first woman ever to win an Olympic gold in skating.
